ITE has administrative headquarters north and south, and the geographical distribution of its 250 staff in six Research Stations throughout Britain allows efficient use of resources for regional studies and provides an understanding of local ecological and land use characteristics.

This report is an official document prepared under contract between the customer and the Natural Environment Research Council. It should not be quoted without the permission of both the Institute of Terrestrial Ecology and the customer.

ITE Land Classification for Northumberland

The following table holds the land class of each square in Northumberland. The format of the table is easting (a three digit number), northing (a three digit number) and land class (one or two digits). The data is ordered by easting as primary key and northing as secondary.

The grid reference follows the Ordnance Survey National Grid, using the numeric convention (Harley 1975). Should a grid reference be held in the alpha-numeric format it can be converted into numeric by removing the two letters and modifying the digits. Northumberland occupies part of four 100 kilometre (km) squares, NT, NU, NY and NZ. In terms of a 1 km grid, square NT starts with easting 300 and northing 600, NU with 400 and 600, NY with 300 and 500, and NZ with 400 and 500 respectively. Having removed the letters, the remaining digits can be split equally into two parts; the first part is the easting the second northing. The easting and northing equivalents are added to the digits to produce the final grid reference, eg NT1234 becomes 312 634 (NT is 300, 600 so 300+12 and 600+34). The six figure grid reference describes a complete 1 km square and on a large scale map (eg 1:50 000) it can be identified by reading the easting value off the horizontal axis and the northing off the vertical. The intersection of lines defines the south west (bottom left) corner of the square.

The ITE land Classification was produced in the late 1970's by multivariate analysis of a number of environmental factors (Bunce et al. 1981). It stratifies Great Britain into 32 different groups called land classes; every 1 km square in Great Britain has been allocated to it's land class. Three national surveys (the Countryside Surveys) have been performed to characterise the different land classes (Barr 1990), and the classification is being used to model the consequences of a variety of different changes (eg Bunce et al. 1992).

The Institute of Terrestrial Ecology is a component body of the Natural Environment Research Council. It was established in 1973, and now forms part of the Terrestrial and Freshwater Sciences Directorate of NERC.

ITE undertakes specialist ecological research on subjects ranging from micro-organisms to trees and mammals, from coastal habitats to uplands, from derelict land to air pollution. An understanding of the ecology of different species and of natural and man-made communities plays an increasingly important role in areas such as:

- monitoring ecological aspects of agriculture
- improving productivity in forestry
- controlling pests
- managing and conserving wildlife
- assessing the causes and effects of pollution
- rehabilitating disturbed sites

The staff can offer objective, impartial, advice on a wide range of topics, and can assess the impact of different land use options. ITE's applied and basic research contributes to the efficient use of the natural environment and provides information on which to base predictions of future trends.
